

JTA is a collaboration between developer Jesper Goos, photographer Ty Stange and designer Anders Mandahl Christiansen. Together we create solutions for the web – the kind of stuff that you would usually go to the bigger agencies to get. Fortunately we're easier to deal with than most, even though we do the same kind of projects.

To have a presence on the web is essential to most companies and organisations. And to have a well-crafted interface to your surroundings helps to build trust and makes a dialogue seem more natural.

Our aim is to translate your message, attitude and voice into communication with a strong visual focus. Our tools may be classic: graphic design combined with photography. But the outcome is new every time and is always in line with the individual project and budget.

The technical side is all about converting the communication to a rock-solid and easy-to-use website or other new media experience. An integration with Facebook, YouTube videos and the vast number of social hubs are among our suggestions. Publishing to smartphones or iPads are other options.

Do bear our advice in mind when you're considering all the options and opportunities. Anyway, every new job always begins with a talk about what you are aiming at. And we'll help you to get there.
